This bibliography project is a product of many agencies' support and many people's efforts, as well as generous grant support by the Nevada Humanities Committee and the Nevada Library Association.

In the late 1990s, the Nevada State Library and Archives became a partner in a federal grant, Five State Library Leadership Project. In addition to other activities, Project Director Shayne Del Cohen held Focus Group meetings at various locations around the state. One of those locations was the North Las Vegas Library in Clark County. Director Anita Laruy supported subsequent workshops and meetings including the participation of Clark County Indian Education Office, Henderson District Public Libraries, Las Vegas-Clark County Library, and tribal representatives from southern Nevada.

Another product of the Five State Project was a series of convocations held in Reno and Elko. These led to a decision to create a bibliography of tribal materials from Northern Paiute, Southern Paiute, Western Shoshone, and Washoe--specifically Nevada-based tribal organizations. Mary Gibson (Western Shoshone), a cataloguer at the Elko County Public Library, compiled the majority of the work on this bibliography.

Nevada Humanities Committee, under Director Judith Winzeler, had supported curriculum development for tribal and cultural history during the early 1990s. They again supported funding for additional reviews and input by tribal educators for this bibliography, in partnership with Nevada Library Association.

We appreciate the support of all of these partners. Careful editing by NSLA staff Mona Reno, Roberta Church, and JoAnne Goena also contributed to the publication of this bibliography.

CHILDRENS BOOKS

👤 Adler, David A. A Picture Book of Sacagawea. New York : Holiday House, 2000.

Summary: A biography of the Shoshone woman who joined the Lewis and Clark Expedition.

RL: Ages 4-8.

[CLAN: NLC]

Critical Evaluation: This book is a good introduction to the story of Lewis and Clark. However, it does not accurately explain the extent of Sacagawea's importance in this mission. She was a woman on a trip with a baby on her back. This story doesn't mention her hardships or feelings during this trip. Many Native people feel Sacagawea was a traitor.

Activity:

This story could be used as a tool to provide discussion about how authors can write about an incident in history and ignore one of the most important characters. This is why our history books are inaccurate. Authors see things in their own perspective.

RL: Ages 9-12.

[CLAN: CCL-DCL-DCS-DEN-DLT-HCL-RMP]

Critical Evaluation: I was impressed with the treatment the author gave this Tribe. In a very concise format, the author has managed to give an excellent depiction of the Shoshone people, then and now. The photos are the best. Here we see Shoshone children dressed just like MTV! It is clear that these contemporary youth are just like the average American kid. This is a great first introduction to the Shoshone people.

Activity:

1. Following the directions in the book, students can weave a basket.
2. Pretending that they have a Shoshone pen pal, students can write a letter asking the Indian youth about modern reservation life.

Reviewer: Sherrie Smokey

Summary: Twenty stories explaining the creation of the world, how the pine nuts came, how the Indians got their music, and other traditions.
RL: Ages 8-11.
[CLAN: CAR-ECL]

Critical Evaluation: My favorite part of these stories was the ending because the ending was always the same: "The rat's tail dropped off." Apparently, this is how Shoshoni storytellers signal the end of the story! It reminds me of an Anglo expression, "It is not over 'til the fat lady sings." Who knows what that means? This little book of Shoshoni tales surprised me because all this time I thought these were Washoe stories. Many of the elements of these Shoshoni tales also appear in the Washoe tales. This is not surprising though when I remember that children from all the Nevada Tribes were raised in the Stewart Indian Boarding School. Also, there has been a lot of inter-marriage between the Nevada Tribes. So, I guess it makes sense that there are generic Great Basin Tales. The tales ring true for me. I have heard versions of many of these and have enjoyed them all.

Activity:

1. Students can draw an illustration from their favorite tale.
2. Using typical Shoshoni characters, students can create their own tale.

Summary: Presents a biography of the young Shoshone Indian princess who acted as interpreter and guide for the Lewis and Clark expedition.

RL: Ages 7-9.

[CLAN: BTM-LYF]

Critical Evaluation: This is an excellent beginning reader about the famous Indian guide, Sacajawea. The black and white drawings depict much of traditional Indian life in her time. The text also explains the differences between Shoshone and Minnetaree cultures. Students definitely learn about the second-class status of Indian women in these particular cultures. Readers will be inspired by Sacajawea's strength and courage throughout her ordeal.

Activity:

1. Students can imagine that Sacajawea was reunited with her brother.
2. Write down what Sacajawea told her brother about seeing the ocean.
3. Through class discussion, students can discuss the status of women, then and now, in America.

RL: Ages 4-8.

[CLAN: CAR]

🐾 Ross, Gayle. Dat-so-la-lee, Artisan. Morristown, NJ : Modern Curriculum Press, 1995.

Summary: A biography of Dat-so-la-lee, a well-known Washo Indian basketmaker.

RL: Ages 6-9.

[CLAN: DCL-DLT]

Critical Evaluation: The story includes information about the way of life of the Washo people. The illustrator does a good job using watercolor to paint samples of the types of baskets that were woven by Dat-so-la-lee.

Activity:

A great vocabulary activity for this story would be to gather Native Nevada Indian artifact and the vocabulary word. Pass the basket around the class and each student will choose one item and explain its definition. Native American music can be played in the background as the basket is passed. (It could be like a musical chairs activity.)

RL: Ages 10-14.

[CLAN: AVL-DCL-ECL-HCL-LYC-MNC-NSL-PCL-RMP-TLD]

Critical Evaluation: The photos in this book are great. The color photos are dazzling, but I especially like the old black and white photos because they show the aboriginal way of life of these tribes during the late eighteen hundreds. The text is easy reading and these are good topics. There is one major flaw to the book however, the author has confused the Washoe Tribe of Western Nevada with an Eastern Oregon Tribe. Repeatedly in text and photo credits she makes this mistake. It makes me wonder if there are other flaws as well. I also take exception to the author's inclusion of all these Tribes in one book. I think it is too confusing. I would rather see a book just about the Great Basin Tribes and a separate book about the Plateau Indians. After all, these are very different culture groups.

Activity:

1) Students can choose a favorite photo from the book showing Indian people and create a story about what the people are doing.

2) Students can write a paper describing the differences between two cultural groups: Great Basin and Plateau.

🏠 Thomasma, Kenneth. Moho Wat: A Sheepeater Boy Attempts a Rescue [Fiction]. Grand Rapids, Michigan : Baker Books, 1994 Books.

🏠 Underhill, Ruth M. Antelope Singer [Fiction]. New York : Coward-McCann, 1961.

Summary: This is a story of two boys who break through the barriers of language and backgrounds to become friends. Tad Hunt, traveling on a wagon train to California, befriends a Paiute Indian boy Nummer. His family spends the winter with the Paiutes where Tad and Nummer learn and exchange cultural differences.

[CLAN: ABL- CCL-ECL-HBK- NSL-PCL-SPL-WEL]

Critical Evaluation: This story is a true classic because a leading anthropologist who has extensive knowledge about her subject wrote it. It is also a classic because Ruth shows deep respect for the Primitive Paiute and educates the reader about the tenacity of these people who made a life in the seemingly barren desert. I would recommend this book to youth and adults alike. This is must reading for all who seek to learn more about the traditional culture of Nevada Indians.

Activity:

1. Students can write a paper telling who Nummer was and why he was important to the Hunt family.
2. Imagining that Tad and Nummer meet again someday, students can write a new chapter telling about that meeting.

Wallner, Rosemary. Sacagawea, 1788-1812. Mankato, MN : Blue Earth Books, 2002.

🏠 Westergard, Dixie. Dat-so-la-lee, Washo Indian Basketmaker: A Biography. [S.l. : Westergard, 1999.

Summary: The story of Dat-so-la-lee, traditional basket weaver, her struggles and achievements as she lived through many changes and how basketmaking was her key to survival. Historical lifestyle and culture of Washo Indians is described.

RL: Ages 9-12.

[CLAN: AUS-BKM-BTM-CAR-CCL-CLN-CVB-DVB-DLT-ECL-EUR-ICB-JAC-LYC-LYF-LYS-MNC-NSL-PCL-SPL-SCL-WEL-WPC-WWD]

Critical Evaluation: In this new book, Dixie set out to help the reader understand Dat-so-la-lee's culture as a way of helping to understand her behavior. In this, I think Dixie is very successful. Dixie is not critical or judgmental of the Washoe people. She treats Dat-so-la-lee with admiration and dignity. In the seventies, the Inter-Tribal Council produced a small book on the Washoe people that has become the accepted short text on the Washeshu. I have long wished there was a way to alter this book so that it would be interesting reading for school age children. I believe Dixie has accomplished this with her new book. Her book covers the same topics but makes the subject more interesting because the story is personified in Dat-so-la-lee. Thank you Dixie!

Activity:

1. Students can draw a picture of a baby in a cradleboard like the one in the book.
2. Pretending that they are a baby about to be blessed in a Washoe Naming Ceremony, students can write down the name they would choose for themselves and tell why.

Critical Evaluation: This book is a valuable piece of historical work as it describes the life of Lovelock Paiutes before and after the White man invasion into traditional Paiute lands. The reader learns about legends, leaders, food, clothing, marriage rituals, hunting, education and other aspect of Paiute life.

Lalla Scott includes notes at the end of the book with references for further study.

Activity:

Divide the students in your class into four groups. Assign a chapter in the book to each group. Their job is to become an expert on the material and share their knowledge with the group, then with the entire class. Students should take notes on their chapter and, at the end of the reading; all of the students can turn in a class book report.
